BULGARIANS REPULSED

Fortunes of War Turn to Turks at Last Stand.

At 6 a. m. yesterday the London Chronicle cabled the New York World that dispatches from the scene of strife showed that the Turks had gained advantage in the last stand. Among other things the cablegram said:

"The fortunes of war have now turned decidedly in favor of the Turks, who have gained their first advantage in this war at their last stand."

"The Bulgarians have been unable to hold the advanced positions they had stormed at so much cost the previous day, and, having failed to make any impression on the forts around Hademkevi, have now fallen back with their heavy artillery. As the enemy retreated the Turkish guns shelled them, thus reversing all previous experiences of the campaign."

"The fighting has been very severe and the Bulgarian loss, especially in the retreat, was considerable."

"The Turks displayed infinitely better fighting spirit than hitherto and the infantry in particular showed admirable steadiness and morale. Papas Burgas, to the extreme left of the line of Buyuk Chekmeje Lake, is again in the hands of the Turks."

TO PRESERVE MONTICELLO

Should be Protected as a Shrine of Freedom.

Monticello is three miles from Charlottesville, Va. It is an isolated mountain 580 feet high. The estate originally comprised 10,000 acres. It came into possession of the Jefferson family in 1735 and remained in the family until the death of Thomas Jefferson, July 4, 1826. Shadwell, his birthplace, was at the foot of Monticello. At the age of 21 Jefferson began building his future home on the eminence above; he had no architect, no builder but slaves. He made the bricks, wrought the nails, constructed vehicles and trained his laborers, but Monticello house did not stand forth complete until thirty years had passed, many of these years being spent in high positions in the service of his country.

On his retirement from the Presidency in 1809, he found himself a poor man and obliged to part with what was very precious to him, his library. Sixty years of devoted service to his country in its formative period when the foundation stones were firmly laid, brought no period of luxurious living, lavish display to him only poverty and debt. The large estate had dwindled to 409 acres and now contains about 218.

Monticello is private property now and suffering the desecration of being lived in. This former mecca for all races and creeds is subject to the uncertainties and transfers of individual fortune and casualties attendant upon all private property. Once gone, it could never be replaced.

The Jefferson-Monticello Memorial Association of America is making an effort to secure legislation through the Congress of the United States to place Monticello along with Mount Vernon, Arlington, "The Hermitage" and Lincoln's Home as a National Shrine, and petitions are being circulated for that purpose throughout the country. The one for this locality is in the hands of Daniel S. Horn, Esq., Room 4, Ridenour Block, where any one desiring to sign can do so. The highest instincts of patriotism and justice should incline you to give your name to this good cause.

Sightseeing in California—Oakland, Berkeley, Piedmont, Santa Cruz and Big Trees.

Oakland

This town with 150,000 people, would well serve as a San Francisco; $186,000,000 of assessed property, 18 banks, three "trans" railroads, 500 factories, three high schools and 42 of a grammar grade is evidence that in the midst of the Fruit Basket County, their 512 miles of paved streets would not be noiseless. The Claremont Club grounds were very attractive and Idora Park especially, where Weber's Band of Chicago, with fifty pieces set the atmosphere vibrating. The band of us in special car crossed street Alcatraz, wet on the one side and dry on the other. Dry and Berkeley.

Berkeley

Here another 45,000 people lived with possessions valued at $36,000,000. This is a real city of homes surrounded with roses and palms, or terraces of Ivy Geraniums, Red Geraniums, Fuschias and Daisies sometimes hedging lots that sold at $35 a foot. Giant Eucalyptus trees were everywhere. Buildings springing up as homes at the rate of 130 a year were not the less beautiful due to an apparent rush of construction, but were ideal. Our party was ushered into the grounds of California's University, and in and among some of the 37 buildings. Here we learned that 3,860 students produced an income of envious amount for the school that maintained a faculty of 387 instructors. It was said that $500,000 was expended yearly for buildings and equipment, and that 1,000 students alone took Chemistry in the scientific agriculture department now owning 5,400 acres of land. A large Greek Theatre (open-air theatre) donated by William Randolph Hearst, was rather impressive; but we could not tarry long enough to gain much more knowledge than the eye could see. There was too much to think of making a study of the grounds. A quaint Unitarian Church sufficiently large to seat 250 people was close by, to which was attached the story that it was built from the lumber of but one of California's giant trees (80,000 feet of lumber), shingles and all, even the paper for the hymn books being made therefrom. We doubted the latter, however true it may be. Another city, that of destined to be swallowed by its encroaching neighbors, was another spot of homes and parks exquisitely kept by the landscape gardener. Here lay nestled among the palms and profusion of flowers a sulphur spring perhaps as popular as that of Bedford County, and near it a dainty Art Gallery endowed with one-half a million dollars' worth of paintings, and real gems. School children romping about in nicely kept grounds told that school had opened (August 1st) in what seemed to be the midst of summer time. It should have been stated that the park, in which was found the sulphur spring and art gallery of so high value, was owned as a beauty spot about his mansion. The flowers sparkled in the sunshine about the various palms and gallery. Everywhere was real splendor. A lady was heard to say as she was called to leave the grounds: "It's perfectly aggravating to know that we do not have more time."

A characteristic feature of the people was their custom of cremation, a special building being erected for the crematory process. Strolling along the street, a conspicuous LADIES' EXCHANGE was noticed. Several remained outside and wondered what could be its mission and we were informed it was a practical place where wives might be exchanged; yet in reality, a rest room for the wearied shopper.

After dinner at St. Mark's, Fruitvale, the home of Joaquin Miller, we visited, then the Cawston Ostrich Farm and Alameda, another town of 30,000, returning to the seaport by 5:30, a day well filled. We had no more time to spend here. Sixty-two days had already gone by and 4,749 miles had been covered. There remained but thirty-one days and it seemed we were over but half the course. This cosmopolitan city had been looked forward to as the middle of the trip. With the next day, we left it for the south, but holding in memory its superb spots of interest.

Santa Cruz and Big Trees

Very foolishly one took a train in advance of the other; one anxious to visit Leland Stanford Junior University at Palo Alto; the other compelled to send home accumulations that were becoming a burden. It is all said when told that misunderstandings found me in Santa Cruz that night, leisurely strolling along its highly diversified coast line, alone, and so was my companion, but I had not the least idea where in the state he was. At the time I dismounted from the train at Santa Cruz, a lady had lost her Adam. With a strain of anxiety she awaited the next train and so did I to be well paid, for as her husband reached the platform she cried out with joy: "My God! there he is, I knew he wouldn't desert me," and happily they reunited, but not I and Hoover.

Out Out Blight Now

A correspondent who does not sign his name, and, consequently, can not be answered by a direct letter, mailed from Northumberland, Pa., to Professor H. A. Surface, State Zoologist, at Harrisburg, a package of apple twigs, asking "Will you kindly tell me what is affecting these twigs, and give me the best preventive or cure. I thought it was Twig blight. In bad cases the twig dies from the effects of it, toward the tip. These branches are from trees huddled three years." To this letter the State Zoologist replied as follows:

"The twigs sent show recent infection with the disease known as Twig blight, also called Fire blight, Black blight, Pear blight, etc. There is but one remedy for this, and that is, to cut it off and burn it, well below the blighted area. The blight is a germ disease of the apple, pear and quince, and appears to be worse in certain weakly varieties, and also worse in those which have made rapid growth, and, consequently, do not have hardened wood.

It is liable to be carried by pruning instruments, and hence these should be sterilized occasionally by passing quickly through a flame, or by dipping into a solution of formalin, kerosine or turpentine, or wiping with a cloth saturated with one of these liquids."

Swelling the Goat

The boy was leading a goat down the Avenue in Washington and there were other boys following as boys usually do. Strolling along that way was a congressman, who had in his pocket a letter from home stating that his fences were in good condition, and that the boy scouts had received their new uniforms and were for him.

As long as the other fellow had not "got his goat" the joyous legislator intended to talk to those boys about their goat.

"Well, my lads," he said in the benign tones of a man who has things coming his way, "what are you doing with the goat?"

"Why we are leading the goat. He has just ate up a crateful of sponges."

"Sponges! Does he—er have an appetite for sponges?"

"Dunno. But he just swallowed 'em."

"And where are you going to take him now?"

"We're going to take him down to the water trough and give him a drink."

"What do think will happen?" said the congressman, amused.

"He'll swell up into the size of an investigating committee record, sure."—National Magazine.

THE BEST PROOF

Bedford Citizens Cannot Doubt It. Doan's Kidney Pills were used—They brought benefit. The story was told to Bedford residents.

Time has strengthened the evidence. Has proven the result lasting. The testimony is from this locality. The proof convincing.

Mrs. C. Weyant, Clarence St., Hyndman, Pa., says: "I was in poor health for some time and I now think it was due to inactive kidneys. Chills and dizzy spells annoyed me and I suffered a great deal from pains in my back. My husband finally procured a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and I commenced their use. The first few doses brought me great relief and it was only a short time before I was in the best of health." (Statement given October 12, 1907.)

Lasting Effect

When Mrs. Weyant was interviewed some time ago she said: "The cure Doan's Kidney Pills effected in my case has been permanent. You are at liberty to use my statement at any time you wish."

Where Marrying Is Wrong

Much is heard of the taxation of bachelors; but little is ever said of the communities wherein matrimony is deemed a punishable offense. Perhaps the most extraordinary ideas with reference to this subject may be said to be held at Oxford University in England. There, for instance, a fellow of All Souls College forfeits his fellowship, if when studying the classics, he should take unto himself a wife. In such event he must not only pay a penalty, but must also present his college with a memorial in the shape of a silver cup, with the further condition that on this cup shall be inscribed in Latin, "He backslid into matrimony."

There is an aristocratic club in London, the Bachelors of Piccadilly, whereof the members who so far forget their loyalty to the club as to marry are actually expelled and ostracized. The only saving feature of such expulsion is that, by the payment of a fine of one hundred dollars, the offending one may retain an honorary membership; but so far as active membership is concerned, he is strictly out of it for the rest of his life.

There is a similar organization in Germany, the Jungesellen Club. Whenever there comes to the officials of this club any intimation that a member contemplates matrimony, he is immediately summoned for trial in the club court, with the president as judge. The culprit is allowed to plead in extenuation of his offense, and upon his skill in presenting such plea depends the amount of his fine, which ranges from one hundred to one thousand dollars. The humorous feature of the fine consists in the application made. The money is devoted to a dinner, whereat all members appear in mourning attire. At the conclusion of the repast the president solemnly reads the sentence of expulsion, and the delinquent is led from the room amid the groans and lamentations of his erstwhile club fellows.—The Sunday Magazine.

That Familiar Picture

An actor who is known as Lew is of German decent, and his father speaks broken English. Lew says the old gentleman went to a big art gallery recently and came home greatly enthused.

"Saw a fine painting, Louis," he said.

"You did."

"Yes, it was a fine one—hundreds of people looking at it. It must have been word a hundred dollars, sure!"

"What was its name?" asked Lew.

"Dot I can tell you not, but it was a fine picture."

"Describe it to me."

"Well," said the old gentleman, "there was three fellers. Von was playing the fife, von was playing the drum, and the other had headache."

Gathered In Twelve-Pound Trout

trout caught in Montana streams

What is said to be the largest was received from J. W. Scott, proprietor of the hotel at Armstead. It weighed 13 pounds, 8 ounces. From tip of tail to mouth it measured nearly three feet in length, a yardstick extending an inch at each end when laid beside the catch. It was 16 inches around the fish, measuring over the back fins.

The fish was dressed and when reweighed in Butte tipped the scales at 12 pounds.—Anaconda Standard.

PROPHESY FULFILLED

In Harper's Weekly the issue of Nov. 2nd, the Saturday preceding election day, Colonel Harvey records a remarkable series of prophecies, every one of which has come true. The date upon which each prophecy was made is given under the statement.

I

We venture to suggest the nomination of President Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton University, as the Democratic candidate for President of the United States—March 10, 1906.

II

We have a shrewd suspicion that the Democrats of New Jersey will nominate Woodrow Wilson as their candidate for Governor in 1910, with a view to presenting his name to the Democratic national convention of 1912.—November 28, 1908.

III

We now expect to see Woodrow Wilson elected Governor of New Jersey in 1910.—May 15, 1909.

IV

At the expiration of sixteen months since the above appeared in this place we perceive no occasion to revise our calculations. Mr. Wilson's majority will be forty thousand.—September 24, 1910.

V

We now fully anticipate the nomination of Woodrow Wilson for President of the United States by the Democratic national convention of 1912, as against William H. Taft, Republican candidate.—November 19, 1910.

VI

We end this series of prophecies with a prediction that Woodrow Wilson will be duly elected President of the United States in November next.—July 13, 1912.

VII

We now predict that Woodrow Wilson's majority over all in the electoral college will exceed 300.

This last prediction was not less bold than any of the others, when you stop to consider that many other prophets were debating the probability of the election's being thrown into congress. In fact the most violent partizan of Governor Wilson's could hardly screw up his courage to such a height as that.

It meant that Wilson must get 415 electoral votes, though the highest vote ever cast was 336.

But wild as this prophecy is the truth is still beyond it as the latest returns give him a certain majority of 442 votes.

Colonel Harvey has always been regarded as a reliable prophet in political affairs and he has certainly not only maintained but eclipsed all his previous records.—Valley Spirit.

Of What Use Are We?

We sometimes wonder of what use we are, and why we are put on earth. One day is added to another and we seem to be no farther advanced on the pathway of our lives. As Mark Twain would have put it, we do not appear to be gaining on the scenery. Yet there is room in the world, and need in the world, for each and every one of us, and therefore, we must keep on going to the end. Emerson has a poem in which the squirrel talks to the mountain says: "If I cannot carry forest on my back neither can you crack a nut." You can do something nobody else can do; namely, live your life. You have your chance, if you will only take it, and I have mine. If we can do nothing else we can at least be some one's friend, and there is nothing that the world more keenly wants and more sadly needs.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Some Fish

A gentleman was strolling across a large estate, when he came upon a man fishing.

"What sort of fish do you catch here?" he asked.

"Mostly trout," replied the man.

"How many have you caught?"

"About ten or twelve, sir."

"What is about the heaviest you have caught?" continued the gentleman.

"Well, I don't know the weight, but the water sank two or three feet when I pulled it out."

SAFE HUNTING RULES

Ever since the hunting season has opened the newspapers have contained many accounts of serious gunning accidents, which for the most part, could have been avoided by observing well known precautionary measures in the use of firearms. Prof. H. A. Surface, State Economic Zoologist, offers certain "Safe Rules" to be followed while hunting. It will be observed that almost every recorded accident is due to ignoring one or more of these rules:

1. Always keep the gun pointed from yourself and other persons.

2. Carry a gun with the end pointed either upward, toward the sky, or downward, toward the ground. Never sweep the horizon with it. If accidentally discharged while in the former position no harm is likely to result, but if discharged while held horizontally it may result seriously.

3. In getting over logs or fences always see that the gun is first put over and in a solid position where it will not fall. Then go to another place to climb over, and pick up the weapon with the end pointing where it should.

4. Never pull or draw a gun toward yourself by the muzzle, especially in wagons, boats, over fences, logs, etc.

5. Do not load the gun until after leaving the house, and draw the loads (or remove the caps, if a muzzle loader, and watch that no percussion is left on the tube) as soon as leaving the hunting grounds.

6. Never keep a loaded gun around the house or tent, and do not leave a loaded weapon where it may be knocked down by dogs or children.

7. Do not carry the gun cocked excepting when alert for the game to rise.

8. Do not shoot into moving bushes or in the direction of a noise without being sure the desired game is there and seeing it for certainty. The movement or noise may be caused by some person or by domesticated stock.

9. Watch the muzzle of the gun that no mud, snow, or other material fills it; and do not load as heavily with white or nitro powder as with black powder. This may prevent accidents from bursting.

10. Do not start a fire in the woods without first providing against its spreading, and do not leave it burning under any circumstances.

11. Do not wound game and leave it to suffer and die of its injuries. Better to spend an hour searching for a winged bird than to let it remain and suffer for a day or two before relieved by a merciful death.

12. Do not shoot protected birds or animals. There is a reason for protecting them. Find what it is and you will agree that the law is generally correct in giving them a protective season.

13. If you are going for fun only it is all right to take inexperienced friends, a well-filled lunch basket, literature and a target, and go to the nearest grove.

14. If going for game, go alone or with experienced hunters only, carry only what is essential. Hunt with the back to the sun, slowly and quietly, and in such places and at such time of day as experience has taught that the particular kind of game sought is to be found.

15. Do not hunt for "anything." This generally results in nothing. Different kinds of game are to be found in different places and at varying times of day, according to the species sought. Decide before starting out as to the kind of game to be hunted and the region to be visited.

16. Ascertain if farms or premises are "posted" or hunting is forbidden, and keep out of trouble by either avoiding them or by asking the owners for permission to hunt on those portions where no damage to livestock may result.

17. If fences are knocked down in climbing over them take time to fix them up properly. Leave gates and bars just as they were found. If open, leave them so, as that is evidently what the owner wants, but if closed be sure to close and fasten them as before.

18. Be satisfied with a fair share of game, and do not try to exceed the legal limit or to kill all that may be found just because it may be there.

Accelerated Brain Activity

In the early days of Wisconsin, two of the most prominent lawyers of the state were George B. Smith and I. S. Sloan, the latter of whom had a habit of injecting into his remarks to the court the expression, "Your honor, I have an idea." A certain case had been dragging along through a hot summer day when Sloan sprang to his feet, with his remark, "Your honor, I have an idea."

Smith immediately bounded up, assumed an impressive attitude, and in great solemnity said:

"May it please the court, I move that a writ of habeas corpus be issued by this court immediately to take the learned gentleman's idea out of solitary confinement."—Popular Magazine.

Locomotive Engineer Has Remarkable Experience

I have been thinking that word from me would benefit those who may be suffering as I was before I began taking your Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy. I am a locomotive engineer, employed on the Tyrone & Clearfield Branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Three years ago I was afflicted with kidney and bladder trouble so bad that I was compelled to lay off duty from my engine and was in the care of two doctors. However their medicine did not benefit me. One day I noticed your advertisement, to send name and address for a sample bottle of Swamp-Root. At this time my trouble had reached a serious stage. I sent for the sample bottle and in three days received a small bottle of Swamp-Root, which I took according to directions, and by the time I had taken the contents, I could pass water more freely. I was so pleased with my experiment that I sent my wife to the drug store of W. H. Millick, Phillipsburg, Pa., and secured a one-dollar bottle. I continued taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root until I was entirely cured. Now whenever I feel any pain or soreness after being exposed to bad weather or hard work, I take a dose or two of Swamp-Root. I cannot recommend this remedy too highly, especially to brother engineers who are more or less troubled with their kidneys (more than any other class of men).

Yours truly,

The preparation mentioned by the Rev. Chas. Sager has been for over sixty years of invaluable worth to sufferers from consumption, asthma, bronchitis, catarrh, gripe, coughs, colds and all lung and throat diseases, and is a household remedy in many, many homes to which it has brought health and happiness.

Mr. C. A. ABBOTT,

Dear Sir: I have known for over 40 years of the effects of Wilson's Remedy [Wilson's Preparation of Hypophosphites and Biotin] in cases of pulmonary troubles. At this point I will say to you what you have not before known of, that 4 years since, while I was a resident of N. Y. City, I was severely ill with lung trouble. Physicians said I was a consumptive and my family physician told my wife that he thought I could not recover. My attention was directed to the Wilson Remedy, which I used with splendid effect. I have been on my feet and at work ever since my cure. Yours truly,

REV. CHAS. SAGER,

Pastor M. E. Church, Hunter, (Greene Co.), N. Y.

The above letter shows what a great boon the Wilson Remedy was to Mr. Sager, but it is but one of thousands received testifying to the curative powers of this wonderful remedy. Write at once to Mr. Abbott at the above address and he will furnish you convincing proof of the great worth to humanity of this preparation. Advertisement.

Cat's Long Walk to Old Home

The story of a notable journey of a cat from Kingston, Surrey, England, to its former home at Glastonbury, in Somersetshire, a distance of about 133 miles, is now told by an astonished correspondent.

In April last a cat, mottled gray and described as half Persian in breed, was sent from Glastonbury, where it had been reared, to the matron of the Kingston Nursing home. It was sent in a packing case drilled with air holes and obviously the animal had no opportunity of marking the points of its journey. Soon after arrival at Kingston the cat was lost, and despite the most diligent searching, no trace of it could be found.

The matron of the nursing home has now received a letter from Glastonbury stating that the cat has found its way back to its old home. It arrived emaciated and foot-sore and apparently had walked the whole of the 133 miles.

The letter describes the cat on its arrival as "a mere shadow of its former self" and expresses the belief that although terribly weak through its wanderings, it can be nursed back to a healthy condition.

SHORTHAND WRITING.

"Stenography" Not the Only Name by Which It is Known.

Shorthand writing is known by other names than "stenography." "Tachygraphy" is only one of them. Its second part, of course, comes from the same root as the latter end of "stenography"—that is, from the Greek "grapho," meaning to write. "Tachy" is derived from the Greek "tachys," meaning swift; so only the shorthand writer who has the ability to take down rapid speech and transcribe it quickly has the right to call himself or herself a "tachygrapher." (The "ch" sound is like that of "k.")

"Stenography" comes from "grapho" combined with "stenos," which means "narrow" in Greek. So a "stenographer" is either a narrow writer or she or he practices "narrow writing."

Not so many years ago we heard a good deal about "phonography" as a name for shorthand writing, but the term seems to have gone out of use. It comes from that same useful root "grapho," combined with "phono." The latter word means "sound," so that a phonographer is one who writes down sound as he hears it. The phonograph is, of course, an instrument for writing or recording sound.

Then there are "brachygraphy" "steganography" and "logography" as other names for what we generally call stenography. In the order given they are derived from "grapho" combined with "brachys," meaning "short;" "steganos," meaning "covered;" "secret" (a stenographer is one who writes in cryptic or mysterious writing, not to be read by the uninitiated) and "logos" meaning "speech."—New York Times

FIREFLIES IN JAPAN.

Large and Brilliant and Numerous and Not Afraid of Man.

In Japan fireflies are more than mere beetles. They are Cupid's light to guide lovers, souls of ancient soldiers, the devil's snare to tempt wanderers to death. In their light of magic gold with a tint of emerald green the Japanese see stars of hope, sorrows of broken hearts, the everlasting spirits of warriors, but, most of all, the joys of love and lovers.

Whenever they see the glimmering faint green light of fireflies hovering over the stream running into the darkness of night the Japanese dream of love and loving hearts. The light of fireflies is the guide of lovers going along the narrow paths to meet their sweethearts.

The Japanese fireflies are much larger and give brighter and more steady light than those seen in Europe or America. In old days many poor Japanese students, unable to buy candles, were wont to gather fireflies in a bag and read their books by their light. The Hotaru kago (firefly cage), made of fine laces, placed on the veranda gives almost as bright a light as the large stone lantern, but much more quaint and dreamy.

Fireflies are plentiful everywhere in Japan. They are not at all afraid of human beings and will often alight upon the dress and even on the hair or hands. It is not seldom that fireflies fly into one's pockets or sleeves.—Mock Joya in Strand.

Giant Sharks.

While the whale is regarded as the largest of creatures that haunt the sea, there are some sharks that can be compared in size with the former animals. These giant sharks, however, are very rare and are known under the name of the great whale shark and the basking shark. The former, which attains a length of fifty feet, is found off the coast of India, Peru and Lower California. The latter's most favorite haunt is the Arctic ocean, but it is also found near the great whale shark. These monsters, curiously enough, are quite harmless. Their teeth are very small, and they feed on tiny matter that floats on the surface of the sea. This matter the fish strains through its enormous gill rakers.

First Man Dressmaker.

One day in 1780 a beautiful carriage appeared on the boulevard of Paris with an escutcheon in the shape of a pair of corsets and an open pair of scissors painted on the panel of each door. This was the coat of arms of Rhombert, the first man who made a name as a woman's dressmaker. Rhombert, who was the son of a Bavarian peasant from the neighborhood of Munich, owed his rapid success to his genius for concealing and remedying defects of figure. He left an annual income of 50,000 francs to his heirs.

Took the Hint.

"This seems like a sweet dream," he rapturously remarked as he lingered with her at the door step.

"It doesn't seem like a dream to me," she replied, "for a dream soon vanishes, you know."

He vanished.

What She Wanted

Jim Mann was on his way back from Chicago and couldn't help hearing the conversation of the couple in the section right behind him. They looked like newly married folks, but were not on their honeymoon, as Mann learned by deduction. The woman laid down a newspaper she had been reading and said to her husband:

"Do you know, I wish I had one of these afflictions. Oh, I think it would be just g-r-a-n-d to sit on a rock with somebody and have him rave about the incomparable golden color of my hair and tell me that my eyes were the most beautiful in the world, and—"

"Uh, huh," said the husband, yawning.

"And that the delicate pink of my cheeks had been painted there by the angels, and that he couldn't live without me. O-oh, I think an affliction like that would be—"

"Tisn't an affliction you want," interrupted her husband. "What you seem to want is a plain, old-fashioned Har."—Mack's National Monthly.

Puts Out Petroleum Fires

There are no fires more disastrous than those in which petroleum mineral essences, benzoin, etc., play a part, on account of the difficulty of getting them under control. No really efficacious method has ever been put into use to extinguish fires of hydro-carbonic origin. Water is utterly useless. Danger may be at times reduced to a minimum by preventing contact of air with the flames choking it between blankets, mats, damp cloth, earth, or sand, but this is by no means always sufficient. For this reason scientists are interested in some experiments made recently in German laboratories bearing on the possibility of controlling fires of varying chemical origin. It is said that if a stated quantity of caustic soda solution be mixed with an equal quantity of alum it forms a dough—or mortar—fifteen times as great as the original single quantities. This dough is very light and foamy. If this substance be flung over the petroleum, etc., and the entrance of air impeded, the fire will at once be put out.

An experiment was lately tried in Germany to establish these facts beyond question. An improvised fire extending over four cubic millimeters was extinguished in less than two minutes by an eighty-per cent. solution of the above mentioned substance.

FRIDAY MORNING, NOV. 22, 1912.

A NATION-WIDE RAID

The arrest of 173 persons in 22 states, almost simultaneously, by Government sleuths this week for violating the postal laws and the rules and regulations of the Post Office Department will no doubt have the effect, for a time at least, of putting a stop to the distribution by fake and quack doctors through the mails of both medicines that are useless and of others that do great harm by aiding in criminal practices along the line of race suicide.

Many thousands of people are annually duped by doctors who advertise to cure all ills and very many are assisted in a criminal practice that has become very prevalent in this country.

This action on the part of the Post Office Department will receive the sanction of all right-thinking people and it will go a long way toward stamping out the practice of druggists and quack doctors, while in no way interfering with those doing a legitimate business.

THE UNEXPECTED

When the country, and especially the city of New York, was startled a few months ago at news of the killing of Herman Rosenthal, a gambler, in a well-lighted street in the great metropolis by hired assassins, few if any even dreamed that the shots that laid low the gambler that dared to give to District Attorney Whitman information damaging to "the system" that had shielded and protected criminals and crooks, were the death knell of that system. But "Out of the midnight comes morning and out of the frost blight comes bloom."

So out of a dastardly murder has come an awakened public sentiment and the City of New York has learned a great lesson by which she should profit.

When Police Lieutenant Becker hired gunmen to take the life of Rosenthal he would have laughed at the suggestion of his not being able to protect himself and the assassins and the system; he was thinking only of closing forever the lips of the gambler who had dared to "turn state's evidence."

But he "reckoned without his host." There was a District Attorney in that city who was fearless and had regard for his obligations and for his office, and there was a Judge who determined to "baw to the line" regardless of the direction of the falling chips; and last but very important there were found twelve men who may truthfully be designated as "tried and true." And the result of it all is that Lieutenant Becker who hired the gunmen, and Lefty Louie, Gyp the Blood, Whitey Lewis and Dago Frank stand convicted of murder in the first degree and, barring intervention, will go to the electric chair.

It is to be hoped that the public sentiment now awakened will not die out when the electric current shall have closed the career of a police official who protected gamblers in their vice and criminals, even murderers, in their crime, for pay, and when the faces of four gunmen familiar in the city's dens will be seen no more.

That the "system" did exist is now evident and that these executions will mark its end is to be hoped.

Bryan on Taft and Roosevelt

William Jennings Bryan, editor of 'The Commoner,' writes: "Mr. Taft's retirement from the presidential office would be humiliating to him but for the consolation that he finds in the fact that by running he made certain the defeat of Mr. Roosevelt. Whatever may be the reasons for the personal hostility between the President and the Ex-President, there is no doubt that each one felt justified in suffering defeat himself rather than permit the other to succeed. The Democratic party is the immediate beneficiary of this personal hostility but the country is the gainer. Mr. Taft has done a number of things which reflect credit upon his administration. * * * He is an honest man, a well meaning man, and personally a lovable man, but all these qualities fail to satisfy when he stands in the way of a people's progress. However much one may dissent from the conclusion that the people reach, he is not justified in opposing the popular will when that will is constitutionally expressed. The people may make mistakes, but they have a right to make mistakes. No one can claim the right to make mistakes for them. Mr. Taft's failure to satisfy the demands of the people will be a lesson to those who come after him. But in spite of the monumental reverse he has suffered, he will carry into private life the personal good will of a multitude who voted against him. They will wish him long life, health and prosperity."

"What about Mr. Roosevelt? Mr. Roosevelt's overwhelming defeat can not but dampen the ardor of those who worship him so blindly as to think him invincible. They will now have time to meditate upon the largeness of the American electorate and to realize that it takes a great many supporters to give a man a majority. There were several causes that contributed to Mr. Roosevelt's defeat, first—the fact that he was a bolting candidate. All of the inertia of the party was against him, all the forces of regularity. Then the investigations showed that he was intimately associated with men who do not enjoy public confidence. The men who contributed the bulk of his campaign fund are a liability rather than an asset to a candidate. His attitude on the trust question alarmed those who have studied the trust question and appreciate the menace of private monopoly, but the strongest argument against him was the argument against the third term. He not only asked a third term but refused to discuss any limitation on the number of terms. It is fair to suppose that his defeat will end all talk of a third term for a generation. In fact, the constitution is likely to be amended so as to confine the President to a single term and thus eliminate forever the third term issue."

Democratic Governors

The Democrats won many Governors at the 1912 election. Here they are. William Sulzer, New York; James Cox, Ohio; Samuel M. Ralston, Indiana; John H. Moorehead, Nebraska; Elias H. Ammons, Colorado; Edward F. Dunne, Illinois; Earnest Lister, Washington; S. V. Stewart, Montana; Eugene Foss, Massachusetts; O. B. Colquitt, Texas; George H. Hodges, Kansas.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Railroad Education and Publicity

Education and publicity from every point of view were declared by James O. Fagan to be the keys to the "Riddle of the Railroads." Mr. Fagan is the Boston & Maine towerman who startled the country recently with his remarkable "Confessions of a Railway Signalman."

"On American railroads," said Mr. Fagan, "the Superintendent represents and is responsible for the service. In a general way the service means equipment, the movement, handling and supervision of equipment, and the direction of employees connected with it. In the United States today, legislation, organized labor, the press to quite an extent, and a certain section of public opinion are engaged consciously or unconsciously in a sort of conspiracy to destroy the influence and power of the superintendent, to minimize the personal responsibility of the employee and as a consequence to undermine the confidence of the investing public upon whose financial co-operation the railroads are dependent for betterments and expansion."

"Confronted with these adverse conditions, what is today the prospect for the service in general? "Now this is a sane view of the matter from the standpoint of the traveling public, who are interested in good service, and safety on railroads. Personally, I know absolutely nothing about vested interests or watered stock. I will say, however, that if the press were half as interested in educating the people of the facts in the industrial situation as it appears to be absorbed in ferreting out financial scandals, we would soon have a different story to tell about accidents on American railroads. But for political and sensational reasons the people have been kept in the dark in regard to these fundamentals. Education and publicity from every point of view are the keys to the 'Riddle of the Railroads.'"

IN THE GOLDEN STATE

Bedford Countian Writes Interesting Letter from the Far West.

Pomona, Cal., November 12, 1912. The water supply of this district comes mostly from wells operated by pumping plants. Mutual companies own and control these water plants and the expense of operating the same is borne by the stockholders. They are not run for profit but for the mutual benefit of the orange grove owners. There are also two companies which provide free water to all owners of groves in these companies. These are called free water companies and the expense to the owners is nominal, almost the whole amount being paid to the Zanjeros for turning the water on and off. Each in turn gets the water supply for his grove and the same is turned on and off at any and all hours of the day and night and the Zanjero is there at the minute giving the next grower his irrigation at exactly the time he is to receive it. The water is distributed by means of underground pipe lines with a stand-pipe of about 18 inches at each row of trees and from there it runs into furrows on each side of each row of trees.

These pipe lines start at the pumping plant and run from one to five miles taking the water sure and certain. The water is started sometimes one-half hour before it is due at a certain corner for a certain grove. Many turn-outs are passed on the way but all closed except the one for which the water is intended. It is a wonderful system.

The lack of rain in California is not so great a misfortune as some of our Eastern friends think, as the people get their water supply at the hour they want it, whereas we in the East may be entirely destitute of water during the months of July, August and September.

The abundant water supply comes in most part from the mountains and mountain streams, as well as the snow on the mountains. It is brought to the groves from the canyons in the mountains, where there is a yearly supply. As the water comes out, it is spread over hundreds of acres of ground, each little stream running out 200 or 300 feet when it goes into the ground. It reaches the towns of Claremont and Pomona in one or two years. There are also a good many flowing wells. One large pumping plant at Covina is said to be pumping 600 inches of water, which is equal to a stream a little over 24 inches square, and continually flowing. This pumping plant is said to have cost $150,000. It is one of the very largest wells in California.

The water supply for the alfalfa ranches is spread over the surface by means of loose joints of pipe and is extended and not run into furrows as it is used in the orange grove industry. Alfalfa ranches are very productive, yielding seven crops a year, which is irrigated once a month right after each cutting. The price of ranches set well to alfalfa runs from $300 to $600 per acre with good water rights and are generally sold with full equipment of teams and implements. This is considered a great industry. A large part of the alfalfa is taken from the field before it is hardly cured.

The orange grove property sells at from $2,000 to $4,000 per acre for the best full-bearing groves. Young and partly bearing groves can be had at from $800 to $2,000 an acre.

This is a wonderful country and it has hardly started. Twelve thousand tourists from the East landed in Los Angeles in one week recently with one-way tickets. Many are waiting to come during the year 1915 and thus see the Panama Exposition, which is to be held in San Francisco.

The truck man does a great business in this country, as the majority of the orange and alfalfa ranch men do not raise anything else. They keep a cow or two for their own use and one or more horses to cultivate their groves and buy practically all their feed and truck.

They have at this time nearly all kinds of vegetables and fruit in the markets. We had ripe strawberries, fresh from the field, for dessert at dinner today, the first strawberries we ever ate right from the vines this time of year.

They have also ripe blackberries, grapes, guavas, pomegranates, watermelons, casabas, etc., in the markets now.

Sunday, November 3, we were at church at Lordsburg in the forenoon and in the afternoon visited at Mrs. Hannah Replogle's. They have a beautiful home with plenty of fruit. They seem to be well contented, which is one of the greatest blessings we can have. M. F. Brumbaugh, wife and daughter Rachel, Mrs. Nicodemus and daughter Olive, D. B. Stayer and wife and Galen Hockenbury visited Mrs. Replogle at the same time.

John B. Snowberger and wife and A. T. Replogle, wife and son Percy arrived here in California Sunday morning, November 10. They report having a very enjoyable trip.

A BATTLE IN THE SEA.

Wanton Slaughter When Bluefish and Menhaden Meet.

Did you ever see bluefish charge a school of menhaden at sea? That is something worth seeing. The bluefish throw their lines forward until they almost surround the menhaden, and they attack them flank and rear. The menhaden fairly make the water boil in their efforts to escape, while all around the enemy is at them tearing relentlessly.

Into all this commotion comes a great shark. It's a picnic for the shark, a school of menhaden all herded up for his benefit. It swims leisurely into the midst of them, opens its mouth and takes in half a dozen menhaden at a gulp. It swims around and bites out half a dozen more from the school. It gorges itself without effort.

But the menhaden are not nearly as much disturbed by the presence of the monster swimming about among them as they are by the charging bluefish. The shark takes half a dozen fish or more at a bite, while the bluefish only bites a piece out of a single fish, but there is only one shark, while there may be thousands of bluefish plunging and tearing incessantly and killing and maiming at every stroke.

The shark's a brute, but under such circumstances the menhaden have less of fear than they have of contempt for him.

WONDERS OF BAALBEC.

A Building Problem That Has Puzzled Modern Engineers.

Baalbec, or Baalbek, is the name given a ruined city lying in ancient Coele, Syria, forty-five miles northwest of Damascus.

There is nothing particularly remarkable about a ruined city being found in the locality mentioned, but the size of the blocks of stone used by the ancient builders of this particular city is something that has puzzled the modern engineers since the day when Baalbec was first made the Mecca of the oriental traveler.

There are immense stones on every side of the visitor to this ancient pile of ruins, but the three most remarkable blocks—said to be the largest ever used in the construction of a building—are in a wall back of the temple of Baal.

These immense stones are respectively sixty-four, sixty-three and sixty-two feet in length and each is thirteen feet in thickness, but the most wonderful thing in connection with them is the fact they are at a place in the wall twenty-five feet from the ground. How these immense blocks of granite were ever raised to such a height is a question that has never yet been answered.

Tiger and Lion.

"One time, in order to test the courage of a Bengal tiger and a lion," said a well known showman, "we placed Chinese crackers in the respective cages and fired the fuses. As soon as the fuses began to burn they attracted the attention of both animals, but in a widely different manner. The lion drew into a corner and watched the proceedings with a distrustful and uneasy eye. The tiger, on the contrary, advanced to the burning fuse with a firm step and undimmed gaze. On reaching the cracker he began to roll it over the floor with his paw, and when it exploded beneath his nose he did not flinch, but continued his examination until perfectly satisfied. The lion betrayed great fear when he heard the report of the explosion and for quite a time could not be coaxed out of his den."—London Tit-Bits.

Victoria and the Future.

Queen Victoria's childlike faith in the future life is touchingly revealed in her published letters to Dr. Boyd Carpenter. The only fear that troubled her was lest those she loved who had left this world before her might have outgrown her companionship. "I feel only this doubt," she wrote to Carpenter, "on account of my dear husband, whose tastes were of a higher and different order from mine and who had different interests perhaps from mine. I am far more fit now to be his companion than I used to be, but still I know that he must have soared higher than me."

THANKSGIVING

Governor Tener Issues Usual Proclamation, Naming November 28.

Tuesday night Governor Tener at Harrisburg issued the usual Thanksgiving proclamation, designating November 28 as the day to be observed.

In the proclamation the Governor said:

"The people of our state and nation have many things for which to be thankful in an age of invention, surrounded with unusual resources, with no problem of the unemployed to solve, the people have enjoyed greater safety and comfort, and higher social and intellectual privileges, than have fallen to the lot of man in any previous age of the world."

"There are a number of things in which Pennsylvania in particular has been fortunate. Sheltered by a hundred hills and watered by numerous lakes and rivers, our state is filled with the picturesque and beautiful; yet this diversity has resulted in other advantages. Frost, fire and flood seldom affect us adversely. Even financial depressions lose their force with us because of the variety of our interests; and when the nation has passed through such afflictions, we have been quick to recover."

"During the year just passed Pennsylvania has had no great calamities and no industrial disturbances; her philanthropic and financial institutions have flourished; her rural and urban communities have been unusually free from the scourge of disease; and her overflowing harvests presage a period of unrivaled prosperity."

"It is therefore natural and proper for all right minded people to be filled with a spirit of thankfulness. It has been customary to set aside one day of the year for the purpose of giving expression to this feeling."

He was removed to a farm house on an improvised stretcher and medical aid was rendered by Dr. Moore of Centreville, after which he was removed to the Western Maryland Hospital. His wound is not considered dangerous.

The other members of the party returned Tuesday for their game.

The Woman Makes the Home

She makes it best who, looking after the culinary department, turns her back resolutely upon unhealthful, or even suspicious, food accessories. She is economical; she knows that true economy does not consist in the use of inferior meat, flour, or baking powder. She is an earnest advocate of home made, home baked food, and has proved the truth of the statements of the experts that the best cooking in the world today is done with Royal Baking Powder.

MARY SIMMONS

By T. L. BURBANK

I was the only unmarried man in the settlement and I was powerful lonesome. When evenin' come on each family got under their own roof and sat around the open adobe fireplaces and was comfortable. I didn't have no fireside and if I'd got one I'd had to set by it alone, not havin' any wife or children. Consequences was I was thinkin' o' diggin' out when sumpin' happened to keep me.

I was ridin' along a road when I seen a gal on horseback ahead o' me. I caught up with her and said, "How-de," and "It's a fine day," and neighborly things like that. She was good lookin' and cottoned to me to once, askin' me where I come from, where I was goin' and all that. I told her I'd come from the settlement and I was goin' after some hosses that was needed there and I'd bought 'spec'um' to make a reasonable profit on 'em.

Waal, we talked a lot, and I got kind a confidential. I told her that I was alone in the world and livin' among married people. She allowed it was kind a lonesome livin' alone. I asked her if that was her fix and she allowed it was. We got thicker and thicker, and at last I up and fired a question at her if she would hitch onto me and set up a home with me.

She said it was kind o' sudden, but wasn't a bad idea, and she'd think it over. She was livin' with an aunt on a sheep ranch and was goin' there then. If I'd wait a spell she might decide to double up, and if she did I'd hear from her. When we came to the cross roads we separated and I went on and bought my hosses.

Comin' back with a dozen hosses, I brought some men with me, well armed, for hoss thieves was mighty thick thereabouts, and I didn't know what might happen. Sure enough, when we got to the crossroads, lookin' down the road we crossed, we saw a lot o' men gallopin' toward us. But we was too quick for 'em and reached a wood before they could get near us, and in the wood we had the advantage over 'em, for we could see 'em and they couldn't see us. So we got our hosses away.

The day after I got back Mary Simmons, the gal I overhauled on the road, come into the settlement and when she found me said she'd been thinkin' o' my proposition and was favorably inclined to it, but it seemed unnatural to make up with a man on such a small acquaintance, and she jest thort that if she could get some sort of a job in the settlement for awhile so's we could do some courtin' it would be all right. I told her the only thing I knowed there was plenty of washin', and she said she was a good washer and ironer. So I got board for her at Mrs. Finnegan's, she payin' her own board and keepin' independent.

There had been so much hoss stealin' goin' on that we concluded to keep all the hosses in the settlement in one barn when not usin' 'em, and we wouldn't keep 'em in any one barn two nights runnin'. We thort that in that way we'd keep the thieves from findin' just where the hosses was and they wouldn't know where to go to get 'em. But one night they run in on us and made straight for the barn where the hosses was. There happened to be only six hosses in the settlement that night but the thieves got 'em all.

There wasn't no more hosses taken for ten days, and then we lost another lot, the thieves goin', as before, to the barn they was in. We knowed that they knowed where the hosses was, 'cause none o' the men near any of the other hosses seen or heered anythin' o' 'em. How they'd come to find out where we kept the stock nobody could imagine. There wasn't nobody in the settlement but owned some stock themselves, and they wasn't likely to give information to rustlers about 'em.

I bel'n' sometin' in the hoss tradin' line and havin' lost some hosses, allowed I'd go and get some more. I seen Mary the night afore I went and got her to promise that when I got back she'd marry me. So I went away feelin' better'n I'd felt for a long while.

Waal, I bought my hosses and started back alone with 'em, 'cause I couldn't get no one to come with me. I allowed I'd sleep in the stable with 'em till the stealin' was over and get a head on one on 'em. When I got near the crossroads I sor a woman there, and when I come near her who wouldn't it be but my promised bride. I didn't have time to ask her what she was doin' there when some men rode up from different places, and Mary said to me, motionin' to one on 'em:

"Allow me to introduce my husband."

"And allow me," said the feller, "to relieve you of your hosses." They tuk the whole lot o' 'em, and Mary rode away with 'em too. I didn't keep so much for the stock, but to be treated that away by the woman I expected to marry was like pizen.

Of course it was Mary, in league with the thieves, who got word to 'em just where the animals was kept every night. As I rode on to the settlement bimby I begun to get mad. When I got there I got up a posse to hunt them rustlers off the face of the earth. And I kep' my word. We killed all o' 'em but Mary, but I killed her aadder with my own hand.

The December Outing

Horace Kephart's description of the life and customs of our little known countryman, the mountaineer of the Southern Appalachians, is an extremely interesting feature of the December Outing. Kirk B. Alexander, the author of stories of outdoor adventure, takes us on a jaunt by canoe up an evil-tempered Canadian river, which he and four friends set out to conquer. The cause of their failure is not the least interesting part of the story.

A remarkable series of flashlight photographs of big game in the North Woods taken by H. A. Grant, increases the pictorial interest of the December issue, and in addition there are short stories and practical articles on subjects near to the heart of the outdoor man. Cover design by Charles Livingston Bull. The Outing Magazine, all newsstands, 25 cents; subscription, $3.00 a year.

The December Woman's Home Companion

The December Woman's Home Companion contains a remarkable account of the birth of Christ, written by Washington Gladden. It is a simple, straight narrative—interesting and full of an extraordinary sense of wonder. Reading it is like reading about Lincoln or any other great real figure in history.

In the same number there is an intimate personal account of the little Princess Mary, who is the only daughter of the King and Queen of England. Princess Mary is fifteen years old and has five brothers. The photographs that accompany the article make an unusual feature.

The magazine contains six or eight special contributions that have to do with Christmas—particularly articles showing how to make various kinds of Christmas presents. The fiction is especially adapted to a Christmas number, and a special point is made of the art features. Many of the illustrations are in color.

The regular departments devoted to dressmaking, cookery, and the household, are filled with good reading and suggestions of money value to those who will take them up and make use of them.

Mrs. M. A. Leininger, 413 No. 10th St., Reading, Pa., says she used Foley's Kidney Pills with the best of results for backache and a bad case of kidney trouble that had caused her suffering for a long time. "Since taking Foley's Kidney Pills I have been free from those backaches and I suffer no more with my kidneys. I gladly recommend them."

Kitten Rescues Girl

We often hear of dogs and horses saving the lives of human beings, but it is seldom, indeed that a kitten manages to do this. Yet that is just what a pet kitten did for its little mistress out in Venice, Cal.

The two had been for a walk and had been gone for some time when the kitten came home alone. It went immediately to the girl's mother and began to "meow" and to do all kinds of things to attract the woman's attention. When it saw that it was noticed it started off, but the girl's mother did not follow it at first. The kitten persisted, however, and finally the woman followed it and kept at the heels of the kitten as it led the way to an amusement pier.

There the little girl was found hanging head downward from a large spike. She had fallen from the pier, and her clothing had caught in the spike. Life guards rescued her immediately, and she was none the worse for what was nearly a very serious accident.

Just His Job

Joakly—Now, there's a fellow who doesn't do anything but pick up pins all the time."

Coakly—Well, well! that's a queer superstition.

Joakly—Oh, no; it's not a superstition, but an occupation. He's employed in a bowling alley.—Catholic Standard and Times.

BAD BEGINNING—GOOD ENDING.

That judge who's so majestic And handeth down the law Was once the wildest boy in town And got licked by his cat. He tied in cans to yaller dogs, Vore patches on his seat, And for pure dogged stubbornness "His honor" couldn't be beat.

That preacher—now, I'll whisper this— Was not always so pious. I knew him when he was a kid, And he was sure cut blas. Ask him about that hen he swiped From old Abijah Rue. Of course I helped him pick her bones And thus was tricky too.

That doctor who's so awful good At healing maimed and sick— Of all the fellows in our bunch He surely was a brick. Ask him who painted Tommy Jones Till he was black as night. And bit Bill Johnson ear half off Down at the mudlump fight.

But, last, there is that editor, The booster of our town, He had his tricks behind his ears And did the thing up brown. I'll not give all his tricks away, But here's this on the level: When he first started at his trade He was the printer's devil.

I write these lines for folks whose boys Play tricks and tear their breeches That they may not despair of them And bluster them with switches. Boys will be boys, girls tomboys too, So let them do as they please. We find these kids so full of tricks Most often turn out well.

KURIOS FROM KORRESPONDENTS

Q. Please tell me how some exhibitors manage to have their old fowls finish the molt before the fall fairs. A. About July 1 they put them on short rations and half starve them for two weeks; then they give them a large ration of nourishing food that contains much meat and once a week mix a tablespoonful of sulphur in the mash to every twelve birds.

Q. I have a hen here that is out of shape. She lugs down behind and walks as if her back is broken. What are the cause and cure? A. Your hen is likely broken down because of excessive fat. You may get her back to form by cutting out corn and other fattener and making her scratch in litter for a short ration of oats and wheat. Such hens seldom get normal, are no good for breeders and most too fat to eat. If you kill her watch for tumors.

Q. Why do you suppose my Leghorn chickens set very tails, crooked breast-bones and flop combs? A. Overcrowded chicks are sure to get bone deformities, while hard lice or innutritious food generally causes weakness, of which flop comb is an indication.

Q. How about feeding tankage to poultry? A. Tankage is only fit for fertilizer.

Q. Is cockle seed good for poultry, and how much ought to be fed? A. Our poultry never touch cockle. Even sparrows refuse it, and what sparrows refuse your hens will not eat. Burn the cockle. It is a pernicious weed and crowds out the wheat.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

When we purchased our land at Riverside, Pa., the ground had been farmed to death. It was almost as dead as a door nail. In a few years it was producing the finest crops of grain and hay in this section, and the puzzled farmers finally decided poultry fertilizer did it. This is true and a tip to you.

A Hanover (Pa.) fancier hatched a four legged chicken, and it is now growing a fifth leg. Such fowls might make a hit for garden rakers, but for market they are nil, as customers now kick at counting the two feet and shanks in the weight.

The Welsh Prince, a steamship plying between New York and Japan and the Philippines, has a big henhouse and chicken yard on the lower deck, and spring chicken and fresh eggs are served to officers and crew twice a week. The boat stocks up at the Philippines, where chickens are only 1½ cents apiece, and on its last 40,000 mile trip ducks, geese and chicks were hatched and raised en route. This helped to break the monotony of the trip and furnished delightful eats.

In writing that poultry advertisement give the facts in good style and use clear photographs for cuts. Extraneous language and painted up rooster cuts chase many a customer. Half tones are better than line cuts for illustrations, because the half tone tells the truth, while the line cut is often made by a hot air artist.

In an experiment to decide the cost of raising autumn and spring chicks the Harpers Adams college, England, found that it cost 2s. 7½d. (33 cents) to raise an autumn hatched chick to killing age, 1s. 7d. (38 cents) more than the spring hatched bird. This news is for those fellows who persist in the claim that August chicks pay best.

Scientists of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology are experimenting on a plan to produce eggs free from bacilli. Hope they don't monkey with the antediluvian baymow egg. It goes off when it isn't loaded if goaded.

When a fellow gets the poultry bug it is not wise to let it inject his common sense. There is a legitimate enthusiasm, and there is an enthusiasm, or frenzy, we call it, that upsets the judgment and gets a man into all kinds of difficulty. When a man quits a good position and puts his earnings into poultry before he is wise to the business you may expect to see a failure and a sad one, and when he has a family it's worse.

The department of agriculture recently paid $400 for 1,000 eggs for hatching, or 40 cents apiece. Now, if these eggs hatch as well as government seeds grow, wonder if they'll raise a row.

Panama Pacific Exposition Buildings

Final plans for the architecture of the Panama Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, in 1915, have been definitely accepted, and all of the main exhibit buildings are expected to be completed before July, 1914, eight months before the exposition is to be opened to the public. The exhibit group of structures will be the loftiest exposition buildings ever constructed, and one of the architectural features will be the series of inner courts between the main exhibit palaces, each court expressing some distinct architectural design, as shown in a number of pictures in the December Popular Mechanics.

The Spectacle of a Whole World Asking for Something

In a Christmas story entitled "Ask and It Shall Be Given," published in the December American Magazine, appears the following:

"There is one wonderful spectacle at Christmas-time, more wonderful than any other spectacle we may see on earth; and that is the spectacle of a whole world asking for something. Millions upon millions of us, with each his own desire, asking that it be fulfilled. Asking with greedy eyes; or asking out of sad hearts hopefully. Asking aloud with cheery voices; or asking in silence.

A wish born under cover and kept on the hidden, under side of things. See the great spectacle of millions on their knees before the giving God, petitioning devoutly for something—a new doll, a man's life, a bit of meat to eat. And the Christmas angel, who does the bidding of the giving God, disposes as God disposes."

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

A Bird Magician

In some parts of Europe the tourist may have a little bird called the siskin pointed out to him by a peasant, who says: "That bird practices magic. When he builds his nest he puts into it a certain stone which makes it invisible. Any one who could find this stone in a siskin's nest would also be invisible as long as he carried the stone in his pocket. When I was a boy I used to watch for the siskins building their nest, and whenever I saw one I would climb the tree to get the stone. But the nest had always become invisible before I could reach it."

It is quite true, as the peasants say, that you may see a siskin busily making its nest, and yet, when you crawl out on the very same branch where he was at work, you cannot find the nest at all. But there is no magic in the siskin's methods of building. He simply makes his little home of material whose color exactly matches its surroundings.

Generally he hides his nest in the branches of a fir tree, from which the long tufts of lichen hang like an old man's beard. The nest itself is a small, round structure, and when covered on the outside with lichen and built to nestle close among the drooping lichen growths of the fir tree it cannot be seen at all from below. Even when one crawls out on the limb from which it hangs, oftentimes he cannot find the nest, because it is so perfectly concealed by a branch as to escape notice even at close quarters.—F. K. Noyes in Volta Review.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson VIII.—Fourth Quarter, For Nov. 24, 1912.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Mark ix, 1-13. Memory Verses, 9, 10—Golden Text, Luke ix, 35 (R. V.)—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

This lesson, like the last, is recorded by Matthew and Luke as well as by Mark. It was the one occasion on which the glory which was always in Him was allowed to shine through in this particular way. In the tabernacle and in the temple the glory of God was always in the holy of holies above the mercy seat, between the cherubim, but the veil concealed it—the veil which was rent in twain from the top to the bottom in the midst when He died and which, we are told in Heb. x, 20, represented His flesh or body. John says that "the word was made flesh and tabernacled among us, and we beheld His glory."

As he makes no record of the transfiguration, possibly he refers to it in this saying, as well as to His whole life on earth. Peter undoubtedly refers to the transfiguration when he says, "We made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ and were eyewitnesses of His majesty," for he mentions the holy mount and the words from the Father (John i, 14; II Pet. i, 16-18).

In connection with the coming of Christ in glory which He mentioned in last week's lesson He said that some of those who stood there would not taste of death till they had seen the kingdom of God come with power or the Son of Man coming in His kingdom. Then after six intervening days, or, as Luke says, about eight days, He took Peter and James and John into a high mountain, apart by themselves, and as He prayed He was transfigured before them. It seems to me that the wonder was not that the glory now shone through the veil of His flesh, but that it was always there, yet concealed. But it was, as to His whole life, the time of His appearing as one to us, sin excepted (Ileb. ii, 14).

His face did shine as the sun, and His raiment was white and glistening, shining, white as the light, white as snow. When Moses came down from the mount the skin of his face shone so that he had to wear a veil while he talked with the people (Ex. xxxiv, 29-35). That must have been reflected light. He did not wear the veil when he went in to talk with the Lord and possibly only after he had done talking with the people. Stephen's face seems to have reflected something of the same light (Acts i, 15). How wonderful the statements concerning us in Matt. xiii, 42: I John iii, 2. Consider for a little these two men from heaven who are talking with Jesus and whom the three favored disciples saw and seemed to know, for Peter mentions them by name.

It was over 1,400 years since Moses died and was buried on Mount Nebo (Deut. xxxiv) and perhaps 900 years since Elijah was taken from the side of Elisha on the east of Jordan by a whirlwind and horses and chariot of fire (II Kings ii), yet here they are, alive and well and recognized, as no doubt we shall know all in the glory without introductions. They talked with Jesus about His descent, which He should accomplish at Jerusalem (Luke ix, 31).

By virtue of that atoning death they and all the redeemed from Abel onward had enjoyed centuries of bliss, as it were, on a promissory note now about to be paid. None are in glory nor ever can be except by virtue of that precious blood in due time shed on Golgotha. It is the blood that maketh atonement, and without shedding of blood there is no remission of sins (Lev. xvii, 11; Heb. ix, 22). The disciples were heavy with sleep (Luke ix, 32), and so it was also in Gethsemane. Are we not all in a measure asleep to the great things of God? How often we talk as foolishly as Peter, who suggested the three tabernacles, not knowing what to say.

That is a good word for us, "Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light" (Eph. ii, 14). As Peter spoke a cloud overshadowed them, and a voice came out of the cloud, saying: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. Hear ye Him." And they saw no man any more save Jesus only with themselves (verses 7, 8; Matt. xxvii, 53). To Him give all the prophets witness, and so it must be Jesus only. The Lord alone shall be exalted. See now the kingdom in miniature—the Lord Jesus glorified and with Him the risen saints represented by Moses and the translated saints represented by Elijah. The three disciples may represent all Israel made righteous and the multitude at the foot of the hill the people to be blessed when the kingdom comes.

Blessed are all who see the glory of His kingdom, endeavor now to walk worthy of it and live to hasten it. As they came down from the mount He charged them to tell no one of the wonders they had seen till the Son of Man should be risen from the dead, but just what that saying meant not one of them could tell (verse 10), for they did not believe that He was to die. They remembered some of the last words of Malachi concerning Elijah and spoke of them, and Jesus indorsed them and said that they would surely be fulfilled, but that there had been already a fulfillment in John the Baptist.

HOT FLASHES.

Women in middle age often complain of hot flashes. They are at that stage of life when their delicate organism needs a tonic and helping-hand which only Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription can give them. Many women suffer needlessly from girlhood to womanhood and from motherhood to old age—with backache, dizziness or headache. A woman often becomes sleepless, nervous, "broken-down," irritable and feels tired from morning to night. When pains and aches rack the womanly system at frequent intervals, ask your neighbor about Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Mrs. J. L. HOFF, of 321 S. Benton Street, Baltimore, Md., says: "I wrote you about nine months ago, telling you of my condition. I have a fine baby girl—she weighed nine pounds when born. She is my third child and the strongest of them all. My suffering was only for two hours. I took several bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of Dr. Pierce's Smart-Weed. I never had a well day before I took your medicine. I was surprised how well I felt—could eat—was always hungry, and never had a sick stomach. The nurse who was with me said the medicine was wonderful because I got along so nicely after having had so much trouble before. She intends to recommend it to all her suffering patients. Everybody is astonished at me because I only weighed 102 pounds before and now I weigh 135. I have had several ladies come to me and ask about Dr. Pierce's medicine. I am willing to recommend it to all who suffer and want help. If any want information I will be glad to give it."

The Saving Habit

One of the most difficult and at the same time most essential of habits to form is that of saving. Of course, there are many persons in all walks of life who, although they are in comfortable circumstances are so penurious as to be absolutely opposed to parting even with their pennies. Their very lives are controlled by the idea of getting along with as little as possible even at the risk of earning for themselves a reputation for stinginess. Such persons, however, make up a class all to themselves and generally deserve the contempt in which they are held by their fellow-beings. On the other hand, the spendthrift deserves as much, if not more, condemnation, perhaps, for the facility with which he allows his often hard-earned money to slip through his hands. There is a golden mean between these two extremes of character and it is found in the ability of a man to save from his earnings sufficient for the proverbial rainy day. The advantages of saving may be demonstrated to us in many ways and on many occasions, but it remains for necessity to impress its importance upon our minds. It may be that the manner of living may account in large measure for the universal habit of spending all that we make—the opportunities for doing so are very great and at the same time seem very real and imperative, and it is only after the pocket is empty and we face stern necessity that we are able to discriminate between opportunity and temptation.

THE UMBRELLA.

Its Antiquity and Its Introduction Into English Writings.

Umbrellas were first used in a country where the intensity of the light and heat rendered a shade almost indispensable, and discoveries at Nineveh show that they were carried before the king in time of peace and sometimes in war.

In 1608 Thomas Coryat traveled in Italy and wrote, "The people do carry umbrellas—that is, things that minister shadow unto them for shelter against the scorching of the sun."

In Beaumont and Fletcher's play, 1640, "Rule a Wife and Have a Wife," are these words, which prove that they were then known in England: "Are you at ease? Now is your heart at ease. Now you have got a shadow, an umbrella, to keep the world's scorching opinion from your fair credit."

In 1786 Jonas Hanway died in a house in Red Lion square. He was the first man who ventured to walk the streets of London with an umbrella over his head.

Dr. Shebbear was committed in the court of king's bench for a libel and was sentenced to stand in the pillory, but a servant in livery was hired to hold an umbrella over his head to keep off the rain.

Cowper in the "Task," 1784, thus describes the country girl who dresses above her condition:

Expect her soon with foot boy at her heels,
No longer blushing for her awkward load,
Her train and her umbrella all her care.

FEARED THE HOODOO.

A Story That Was Told on Jesse Burckett, the Ball Player.

Of all the superstitious ball players none can hold a candle to Jesse Burckett the old Cleveland outfielder.

"Jesse and the rest of us were out at Delmar track, in St. Louis," said Bobby Wallace in telling the story "Jesse got down $20 at 3 to 5 on a good thing that may be running yet."

"Burckett had been tipped to this by George Kelster, race track man. After the race Jesse turned on Kelster with one of his snarls, and Kelster, knowing his fear of hoodoos, said:

"I'll put the Spanish curse on you for a week for that."

"The next day Burckett failed to get a hit and muffed a fly. The day after he booted a grounder and struck out twice. That night he hunted up Kelster.

"Come up to my room," said Burckett.

"Kelster went along, and Burckett unwrapped a package, displaying a beautiful ascot, and said:

"George, I'll give you that scarf—it cost me $2—if you'll take off that Spanish curse."

"Kelster snapped his fingers three times and said, 'It's off.'"

"And the next day, strange to say, Burckett made three hits and felled like a fiend."

The Popular Turkish Bath.

There is a widespread use of the vapor or Turkish bath. Even in arctic Lapland the use of a Turkish bath of very primitive form is common. It consists of a hut attached to every farm. In the middle of the hut is raised a kind of beehive of rough stones, and in this a fire is lighted. When the stones become red hot they are drenched with water, so that the place is filled with vapor. Then enter the bathers, who are armed with birch twigs, with which they belabor one another until all are in a state of profuse perspiration. Then all leave the hut and roll in the snow outside. This last function, it will be observed, is equivalent to the cold plunge, which is the final experience in the Turkish bath, as known to us all.—Harper's.

Kept Its Ministers Long

"The town of Lancaster, Mass., in which I live," said Mr. Harold Parker, "is a place of little size—not over 2,000 population—and yet it has enough of individuality and quality, not to speak of history, behind it to make its inhabitants very proud of living there. In the first place it is ancient, a charter having been granted it in 1653, and the same year witnessed the establishment of the first parish church, which I can assure you is no commonplace house of worship."

"The present structure isn't so very old and yet it dates from 1810 and looks good to last other century. The remarkable feature, however, is that in its history of over 250 years this church has had but eight ministers, including the incumbent. Several of them were pastors for fifty years or more and the average is over thirty years, which I imagine is a record no other religious congregation can duplicate."—Baltimore American

Open Air Schools Grow in Favor

With the opening of the fall school term, over 200 open air schools and fresh air classes for tuberculosis and anaemic children, and also for all children in certain rooms and grades, will be in operation in various parts of the United States, according to the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. All of these schools have been established since January, 1907, when the first institution of this character was opened in Providence, R. I. On January 1st, 1910, there were only 13 open air schools in this country and a year later the number had increased only to 29. Thus, the real growth in this movement has been within the last two years. Massachusetts now leads the states with 28 fresh air schools and classes for tuberculosis, anaemic and other school children, Boston alone having over 80. New York comes next with 29, and Ohio is third with 21. Open air schools have now been established in nearly 50 cities and 19 different states.

Chas. Sable, 30 Cooke St., Rochester, N. Y., reports the result of his taking Foley Kidney Pills for his attack of kidney and bladder trouble. "I must speak a good word for Foley Kidney Pills which I used for a severe case of kidney and bladder trouble. They gave me prompt relief and I recommend them at every opportunity." Ed. D. Heckerman, Advertisement.

The United States consul at Prague says there are practically no flies in Bohemia. He attributes the phenomenon to the fact that "everything is made of brick, stone or concrete, and the streets are cleaned several times a day." The reason why the fly is feared is that his habits are so dirty. Yet where he is numerous, his numbers indicate the presence of dirt. Undoubtedly the best way to get rid of flies is not to "swat" them, but to clean up.
